

INDICATIONS FOR AUTHORS

All writing submitted to the redaction for publication on JUS VINI, the Journal of Wine & Spirits Law, must have a scientific character and original conclusions relating to wine and/or spirits law.

The articles and documents selected by the Journal, written in French or English, focus on the promotion of legal doctrine, scientific dialogue, legislative novelties, relevant jurisprudence and doctrine as well as new publications and, more generally, on national, European and international legal news on wine and spirits law.

The Journal does not provide a linguistic correction service. Thus, the authors are responsible for the linguistic quality of the submitted manuscripts. As such, authors who write in a language that is not their own are requested to ensure the paper professionally proofread before submitting their manuscript to the Peer Review.

Each document must be typed in double spacing and not exceed:

- 80,000 signs for doctrine articles;
- 40,000 signs for essays and reports;
- 20,000 signs for notes on case-law, briefs and book reviews.:

These quantities include spaces and notes but exclude summary. The notes are inserted at the bottom of the page, according to a continuous numbering.

As for the bibliographic references and the hierarchy of the titles and the order of presentation, the manuscript must respect the recommendations contained in the document "Referencing guidelines (Oxford - OSCOLA 2012)".

In case of citations from case-law of the Court of Justice of the European Union, it is necessary to respect the ECLI system (European identifier of the case law), detailed here.

To quote the Review itself, follow the following example: P. Xiao, Q. Zong, « China's wine and liquor laws in the age of Internet plus », 1 (2018) Jus Vini 124.

The text, anonymous, is sent to the editorial office (jus.vini@wine-law.org) in an electronic version in Word format, accompanied by:

- the title, which may be supplemented by a subtitle;
- a summary of less than 800 characters including spaces on a paragraph;
- four or five keywords.

In order to guarantee anonymity, the author indicates in a separate file the title of the manuscript followed by his full contact details (e-mail, telephone, mailing address), his institutional connection, his function and discipline, any biographical information and thanks. If the text has several authors, each author provides this information on the attached file.

The illustrations possibly transmitted are made in black and white (grayscale), free of rights and their sources must be specified. The tables can be inserted into Word directly and must be supplied separately (as well as the raw data, in order to adapt them to the format of the Journal). Graphics, maps and photographs shall be provided separately (JPEG, TIF or PDF format and in high definition, that is to say 300 dpi).

Any incomplete or substandard item will be put on hold. Here are the deadlines for the acceptance of manuscripts:

- January 1st for the submission of documents likely to appear on the spring issue (printed in June) ;
- June 1st for submission of documents likely to appear on the fall issue (printed in December).

When the manuscript is complete and anonymous, it is submitted to a Peer Review, composed of at least two anonymous readers, who judge the adequacy of the study with the editorial line and the scientific requirements. The editorial secretary informs the author(s) of the decision taken, according to three possibilities:

1. manuscript accepted (if applicable, subject to minor revisions);
2. request for submission of a new version, to be taken again before the Peer Review;
3. refusal of publication.

The drafting secretary is required to communicate his decision within six weeks of the submission. During this period and in case of notification of acceptance of publication, the author(s) undertake not to submit the writing to other journals and, in general, not to publish it elsewhere.

The drafting committee also reserves the right to make editorial changes. The acceptance of an article does not imply any commitment as to the date of publication. Only documents likely to appear that have not been published elsewhere.
